I would like the City Council and City Attorney to consider the following as it relates to the proposed ordinance dealing with Vacation Rentals.

Many of the new property/homeowners that have or will be relocating to build and live in Bay St Louis purchased their property and had their homes constructed with the understanding that commercial business would not be allowed in residential neighborhoods. The current city ordinance prohibits a commercial business however you as council members are considering an ordinance that takes away that protection in residential neighborhoods. There has been much discussion and concern regarding possible individual lawsuits that could be brought against the city by those who are in favor of allowing vacation rental business if an ordinance attempts to limit or control what they can or can't do. Consider this, if you were to pass the proposed ordinance, the residential property values would be reduced, and the residential property owners will unite and have reason to file a class action lawsuit against the city and possibly the members of the city council. It only takes one or two property owners to find an attorney willing to take a class action on a contingency or minimum cost basis.

I realize that the past city administrations chose to look the other way over the years when vacation rentals began to pop up throughout the city, now the current council must somehow find a way to regulate them. That is the key, regulate what is in violation, not propose an ordinance to allow more vacation rentals. I suggest that you pass an ordinance that grandfathers the vacation rentals that are presently active and establish rules to regulate them, and enforce the existing ordinance that prohibits commercial business in residential neighborhoods.

RE: SRSP-0030-00(034)LPA/106939-401000
Hancock County

Dear LPA Official:

This is to advise that the Mississippi Transportation Commission has concurred in your request to award the contract for the construction of the subject project and you are hereby authorized to send the Notice of Award Letter and contract documents to Morreale Construction, LLC., Waveland, MS. Upon execution of the contract, you are authorized to issue the Notice to Proceed/Notice of Execution to the contractor and copies of this Notice should be furnished to the Chief Engineer, State Local Public Agency Engineer, Materials Engineer and Construction Engineer, MDOT, Box 1850, Jackson, Mississippi 39215, and to the District Engineer P.O. Box 551, Hattiesburg, MS 39403 & District LPA Coordinator, 16499 Highway 49, Saucier, MS 39574. Prior approval by MDOT is required for any Supplemental Agreement and Quantity Adjustment to become part of this contract. See Chapter 7, Item 7.5 Supplemental Agreements in the on-line PDM (www.gomdot.com, Projects, Local Public Agencies).

The LPA's percentage share (20%) will be deducted from each monthly LPA-001 (Generated by MDOT's LPA Site Manager). The Construction Engineering Estimate will be generated in the LPA Division and will be e-mailed to your consultant (James J. Chiniche, P.A., Inc.) to set up the monthly engineering progress estimate. The total project cost (consists of the low bid, the CE&I amount, and contingencies) for this project is $193,855.00. Federal funds in the amount of $155,084.00 will be applied toward this project. As a reminder, any cost exceeding the federal amount of $155,084.00 will be borne by the LPA.

The CFDA number, 20.205-Highway Planning and Construction, is to be used on the Schedule of Federal Expenditures to report the federal project expenditures incurred in the current fiscal year.

Your attention is respectfully directed to the on-line PDM as it pertains to engineering and supervision of the construction and sampling and testing of materials. Also, as contained in the PDM, it is requested that ten (10) copies of the executed proposal, contract documents, and half scale plans be furnished to this office for distribution. One of these copies must be certified by the LPA as a true and correct copy of the original.

Attached are the original OCR-481-LPA Forms for the referenced project. Copies of this original, approved form must be inserted into each of the executed contracts. The LPA must retain the Original OCR-481-LPA Form for their files.

There are several forms used to monitor the contractor's progress in administering the Disadvantaged Business Enterprise requirements in this contract: OCR-482-LPA, OCR-483-LPA, OCR-484-LPA, OCR-487-LPA. If you have questions concerning usage of these forms and what you should do with them, you may contact the Civil Rights Division, Box 1850, Jackson, Mississippi, or @ (601) 359-7466.

Also, included in the attachments are the following forms:

- RPS-1 (Rev. 5-05) - Request for Permission to Subcontract, which we are recommending that LPA's utilize unless they have their own form. Please do not use the MDOT CAD-720 form.
- NRAA-1 (Rev 6-05) - Notice of Requirements for Affirmative Action to Ensure Equal Employment Opportunity (Executive Order 11246).
- SCC-1 (Rev. 12-02) - Sub-Contract Certification for Federal Aid Projects.

It will be necessary to hold a preconstruction conference before the contract time is scheduled to begin and before the beginning of any construction on this project. Please contact your District LPA Coordinator for the persons that should be included in attendance at the preconstruction conference.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey C. Altman, P. E.

Resolution

RESOLUTION REQUESTING AND MEMORIALIZING THE MISSISSIPPI LEGISLATURE TO AMEND THE APPLICABLE SALES TAX LAWS AND USE TAX LAWS TO CONTINUE TO PROVIDE THAT 18.5 PERCENT OF THE SALES TAX COLLECTED FROM INTERNET INTERSTATE SALES SHALL BE PAID TO THE MUNICIPALITIES AS CURRENTLY PROVIDED FOR IN-STATE SALES; AND FOR RELATED PURPOSES

WHEREAS, the rapidly growing use of online purchases by Mississippians has already dramatically altered the source sites of retail sales in Mississippi and has already had a major impact on the operating budgets of municipalities throughout the state of Mississippi; and

WHEREAS, the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of South Dakota v. Wayfair, Inc., et al, has held that states have the legal authority to tax interstate sales in the same manner as intrastate sales; and

WHEREAS, the State of Mississippi should enact amendments to applicable sales and use tax laws that would tax interstate sales on the Internet in the same manner as intrastate sales; and

WHEREAS, amendments to tax interstate Internet sale should distribute the collected taxes in the same proportions as currently exist for municipal allocations of sales tax collected by the Department of Revenue—i.e. out of the 7 % total sales tax, 18.5% should be distributed to municipalities and 81.5 % to the State treasury; and

WHEREAS, if the Legislature adopts amendments contrary to the longstanding allocation of sales tax between the municipalities and the State, the consequences of the declining source of sales tax revenues for cities would compel cities either to make dramatic cuts in basic services for law enforcement, public safety, health and welfare of the citizens of Mississippi, most of whom live within incorporated municipalities, or raise property taxes.

The explosion of online retail sales has fostered a debate about whether and how to collect taxes on those purchases from companies that are not currently required to collect them. During the 2017 legislative session, the Mississippi House of Representatives passed a bill regarding this issue. That bill, HB 480, died in the Senate Finance Committee, but the issue itself is not going away.

The Mississippi Department of Revenue (DOR) has proposed a regulation very similar to the legislation. A major difference between the regulation and the legislation is that HB 480 would have directed that the taxes collected by certain out-of-state sellers be spent on road and bridge repair.

Although there are many aspects to this debate, this paper is intended to explain only a few of the policy matters involved. It does not seek to take a side, but to impartially explain the pertinent facts.

For the most part, we will deal with things as they are, not as they should or should not be.

Before we get started, an understanding of the terminology is important.

First of all, the internet sales tax is not really a "sales tax." It is a "use tax," which is a tax due on the purchase of property acquired "for use, storage or consumption within this State on which Sales or Use Tax has not been paid to another state..." according to the Mississippi Department of Revenue (DOR).

Use tax rates are generally the same as sales tax rates, but use taxes are treated differently in terms of where the money goes after it is collected by DOR. All of the use tax is retained at the state level while a portion (18.5%) of the sales tax is sent back to the Mississippi municipalities where the sales were made.

A company that has a physical presence in Mississippi is required to collect sales or use tax at the time of a sale. Whether companies that do not have a physical presence here may be required to collect and remit a use tax is a major point of the current debate and is discussed in this paper.

Is this a new tax? Is it a tax increase?

The answer to both questions is no, at least as applied to the tax itself. The process to collect the tax will be taxing – logistically, financially, and emotionally – especially for small businesses. But the use tax on the purchase itself is neither a new tax nor a tax increase.

Here's why. For every item you buy right now that is subject to sales or use tax, you are the one who owes the tax. It would have perhaps been more accurate to call it a "purchase tax" than a "sales tax." The tax is not on the business from which you purchased the item. The tax is assessed on the item itself, and you as the purchaser owe the tax.

In order to make it easier to identify and collect the tax, the state requires sellers (retail stores, for instance) to collect it for you. That's why it's not included in the price of the product but is identified as a separate item on your receipt. (In contrast, businesses include the cost of their own taxes, such as income or property taxes, in the underlying price of the product, not as a separate item on the receipt.)

Consider this analogy. You owe tax on your income. In order to increase compliance, the state requires your employer to withhold money from your paycheck and send it to DOR. That's not a tax on your employer. You are the one who owes the tax. If your employer doesn't withhold enough, you still owe the full tax on your income, and you are required to remit it when you file your tax return.

In the same way, if a retailer – in-state or out-of-state – collects an adequate amount of sales or use tax for you, you owe nothing more. But if the retailer does not collect it, you still owe it.

Mississippi's Internet Sales Tax: Answers to Common Questions - Mississippi Center for Public Policy

Whether you have noticed or not, or whether you have answered it truthfully or not, your Mississippi tax return asks you to identify the amount of purchases you made from out-of-state companies for which you did not pay sales or use tax. You are supposed to pay 7% of that amount to the state. Apparently, not many people do that.

If you buy an item in another state and the seller charges you sales tax in that state, you can deduct that amount from the use tax you would otherwise owe to the state of Mississippi. The very important exception to this: you cannot deduct sales or use taxes paid in another state on most motorized vehicles (cars, trucks, motorcycles, boats, etc.) whose first use will be in Mississippi. In other words, if you buy one of those items in another state, and it has not been used before, you will owe the full use tax in Mississippi even if you paid sales tax in the state where you bought it.

Since this will result in my paying more taxes than I do now, how is this not a tax increase? The only reason you would pay more taxes under the new policy is if (a) you buy more online this year than last year, or (b) you haven't been paying the use tax you already owed. To say it is a tax increase to require you to pay what you owe would be analogous to saying it is a tax increase if you have avoided paying income tax in the past but now your employer will be required to withhold income taxes from your paycheck.

To summarize: the tax on purchases from out-of-state sellers is a tax that is owed now; it is not a new tax, and it is not a tax increase.

If the tax is already owed, what's the problem with requiring sellers to collect it?

Regardless of the merit of taxing internet sales, the issue hinges on whether one state can require companies in another state to collect a tax on its behalf if that company has no physical presence in the state. The U.S. Supreme Court has spoken directly to this question and determined that states cannot do that. The U.S. Constitution's "commerce clause" gives the U.S. Congress authority over interstate commerce. Thus far, Congress has not given states the power to require businesses beyond their borders to collect use taxes if those businesses do not have a physical presence in the taxing state.

WRONG NOW!

If that's the case, has Congress shown any interest in allowing it?

Numerous bills have been introduced in Congress to allow states to do this, but none have become law. The U.S. Senate passed the "Marketplace Fairness Act" in 2013 to address this issue, but the House has never acted on it.

Since Congress has not acted, what governs internet tax collection?

Until Congress decides otherwise, a U.S. Supreme Court ruling sets limits on what states can do to collect taxes on interstate transactions. In the case of Quill v. North Dakota, in an 8-1 decision, the high court said that a state can only require businesses with a physical presence, known as physical "nexus," to collect taxes on the state's behalf. To allow otherwise, the court said, would be too expensive and burdensome for companies to try to comply.

WRONG

How complex can it be?

The Wisconsin Department of Revenue has an entire webpage, with a description of 10 different scenarios, to explain how that state taxes ice cream cakes. In some cases, the determination of whether a cake should be taxed is based on whether or not a napkin is offered to the customer! <https://www.revenue.wi.gov/Pages/TaxPro/news-2010-101108c.aspx>.

Such detail, multiplied by the nearly 10,000 sales tax jurisdictions in the country, each with its own variety of rules about which items are taxed at which rates, and each of which has its own forms and filing requirements, makes compliance daunting, especially for small business owners who could potentially face expensive audits from dozens, if not hundreds of tax jurisdictions.

If Congress does eventually pass a bill, what safeguards are likely to be approved for small businesses to deal with the complexity?

Any answer to this question is speculative, but there are some generally accepted protections that were in the Senate-passed bill in 2013 and are in proposals being considered currently by key House leaders. Here are three:

1. Online sellers with less than $1,000,000 in remote sales annually would be exempt from collection requirements.
2. States (or the federal government) would be required to buy and provide software for managing sales tax compliance, at no cost to the business that would be required to collect the tax.
3. Retailers would not be penalized (would be "held harmless") for any errors that result from relying on state-provided software.

Are those safeguards in the proposed DOR regulation?

No. The regulation proposed by DOR would apply to any business selling a total of $250,000 or more to Mississippians in any given year. There is no provision to provide software. And unlike at least 24 other states, the DOR regulation offers no liability protection if sellers rely on sales tax collection software.

If the U.S. Supreme Court has said states cannot require out-of-state businesses with no physical presence in-state to collect these taxes, why would DOR attempt to do so anyway? DOR Commissioner Herb Frierson was quoted by the Associated Press as saying, "The whole purpose of it is to get the issue back in court and see if the Supreme Court will look at it again. What we're doing is probably unconstitutional, but we've got to do it to get another hearing." Other states including Alabama and South Dakota, are already in court attempting to force a reconsideration of Quill. Mississippi's proposed regulation is very similar to Alabama's regulation, so the benefit of inviting a lawsuit against Mississippi is unclear.

For the legislature, the apparent motivation behind HB 480 was to increase the amount of money being directed toward road and bridge repair, by allocating to that purpose the amount of use taxes collected and remitted by out-of-state sellers. Of that amount, 70% would have gone to the state Department of Transportation for state-maintained roads and bridges, and 30% to cities and counties for local road and bridge repair. Normally, the use tax goes into the General Fund, which is the primary source from which the legislature appropriates funds to schools, Medicaid, prisons, etc. Road and bridge funding comes primarily from the tax on gasoline and other fuels, generally referred to as the "gas tax."

Other Common Questions

Do out-of-state sellers enjoy an unfair benefit by not being required to charge taxes?

Those who would answer "yes" say local, brick-and-mortar retailers are placed at a competitive disadvantage because the cost of an online product is automatically 7% less to consumers since they aren't charged sales tax on the purchase. They say this hurts local business owners who provide jobs to people in the community, support local organizations such as sports teams and local charities, and are a significant source of local taxes that pay for schools, roads, and police and fire protection. And because they collect sales tax, not use tax, their communities receive 18.5% of the tax they collect on their sales, further benefiting their hometowns.

Those who would answer "no" say it is wrong to place the tax-collection burden on out-of-state sellers because the sellers don't use water and sewer infrastructure, or fire and police protection, or other benefits provided by local and state government to brick-and-mortar establishments. They also say buyers generally choose to purchase online more for convenience than price, so the 7% difference would not change the purchasers' buying decisions. In addition, they say sales tax collections have not declined despite the rise in online sales.

I noticed Amazon is now charging me 7% on the items I buy from them. If they aren't required to collect tax on their sales to Mississippians, why are they doing so?

There appears to be no statutory prohibition on an out-of-state company voluntarily collecting a use tax, even if the company is not required to do so, as long as it sends DOR the full amount it collects. Amazon has chosen to charge a use tax on items purchased directly from Amazon. For independent sellers who list their items on Amazon, a use tax is apparently not being collected. As to why Amazon has chosen to do this, the answer is not clear (see next question).

Do we know whether Amazon is receiving any special benefits as a result of their agreeing to collect a use tax?

No. Because DOR refuses to release the terms of its agreement with Amazon, we don't know exactly what was agreed to on either side. We don't know whether Amazon agreed to collect the tax only if DOR agreed to issue its currently-proposed regulation that would penalize other companies that don't do what Amazon has done. We don't know how long DOR is giving Amazon to remit those taxes, or how much Amazon is allowed to keep to cover their costs (other Mississippi businesses may keep up to 2% of the total tax they are remitting, not to exceed $50 per month), or any other actions or costs to which DOR may have obligated Mississippi taxpayers.

The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling (<http://story/news/politics/2018/06/21/supreme-court-allows-sales-taxes-online-purchases/699556002/>) allowing states to collect online sales tax should mean an injection of $50 million to $75 million to state coffers, Mississippi's tax chief said Thursday.

It also is likely to stem sales losses and closures of mom-and-pop retailers across the state to the growth of online shopping, proponents say.

And it will most likely prompt Gov. Phil Bryant to call the state Legislature back to Jackson for a special session in coming weeks. This is expected to provide lawmakers another crack at providing more money for the state's crumbling road and bridge infrastructure — something over which they've unsuccessfully haggled for more than three years.

The boon comes as business and transportation leaders continue to lobby lawmakers to find $300 million to $600 million more a year for state and local road and bridge repair and maintenance. House leaders have already tried to earmark current and future online sales tax collections for road work, but the Senate has shot down proposals.

State Revenue Commissioner Herb Frierson said he estimates the change from the court ruling will allow the state to collect about $50 million more in taxes in the first year, then increase to about $75 million a year.

Frierson said the state's 7 percent use tax laws already allow collection of the taxes, and his office should be able to handle the collections without changes in process or laws or increased personnel. Frierson said his office could begin collecting the online sales taxes starting July 1.

He said earmarking where the increased collections would go would likely require legislative action. Also, local governments and some legislative leaders have pushed for a change in the law to direct some online taxes to be given to local governments, similar to the 18.5 percent of sales taxes returned to the cities where retail sales are made.

Bryant was in Washington on Thursday and unavailable for immediate comment on the ruling. His office issued a statement that he remains in discussions with legislative leaders about a special session and "if those discussions produce a framework, he'll call one."

What will collecting internet sales taxes mean for Mississippi?

But Bryant recently said such a court ruling would require legislative action, if only to statutorily direct any increased collections from online sales since the state budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 has already been set. He has also floated the idea of adding the creation of a state lottery to a special session.

A spokeswoman for Lt. Gov. Tate Reeves, who presides over the Senate, said the online sales tax issue has always been one for the Supreme Court or Congress to decide, not the Legislature. She said it will "level the playing field" for brick and mortar retailers.

"Lt. Gov. Reeves looks forward to continuing conversations with Gov. Bryant and Speaker Gunn on how this policy should look for Mississippi and its communities and how to prioritize the revenue generated on state needs."

House Speaker Philip Gunn did not immediately respond to requests to his office for comments.

Mississippi has already been collecting some online sales taxes through its "use tax" that has been on the books for decades. Some online retailers, including Amazon, have been voluntarily paying the state.

Mississippi levies a 7 percent sales tax on goods purchased in-state. It also has a 7 percent use tax on the books, and individuals and companies that buy from out-of-state sellers are supposed to pay the use tax. While some businesses pay the use tax, most individuals do not.

For fiscal 2017, the state collected $310 million in use taxes, about 4 percent of the state's tax revenue. For fiscal 2018, nearing its end, the state collected $318 million in use taxes, including $63 million from "voluntary" taxpayers.

Sales taxes were more than $2 billion last year, or 38 percent of the state's $5.4 billion in tax collections.

Frierson said there are already roughly 40 sites paying internet sales tax because they have a physical presence in the state. An additional 22, such as Amazon, voluntarily pay the tax.

"Now we're going to pick up all the ones that didn't voluntarily pay," Frierson said.

Estimates have varied widely — from the low tens of millions of dollars to $100 million — on how much the state is not receiving from internet sales.

Frierson said he expects a "spinoff" effect from collecting internet sales taxes.

"I think we will see less local small-town main street retailers going out of business because this will level the playing field," Frierson said. "I believe there have been many businesses closed down in rural America strictly because of internet sales."

Attorney General Jim Hood called Thursday's ruling "a victory for our Main Street merchants in Mississippi." He said he and other attorneys general have been successful in convincing the high court the Constitution protects states from "federal legislative and judicial overreach."

Hood said: "I have supported an internet sales tax from the beginning, not only because it will bring an estimated $50 million in the first year for our state, but because this means our local brick and mortar stores are now on a level playing field with businesses that have no storefront in Mississippi ... Now, there's no difference in someone walking into a store to buy shoes and sitting on their couch and doing the same thing from their phone."

But opponents of collecting internet sales taxes say a tax increase is a tax increase, and removing money from consumers' pockets and giving it to government will have ill effect in the long run. They say it will hurt small online businesses.

Russ Latino, state director of Americans for Prosperity, said Amazon and other large online sellers are already collecting Mississippi taxes on sales and the court decision "won't have the profound impact on Mississippi's revenue collections that many have predicted." He said it will increase the size of government.

Latino said that if the use tax issue has truly been about fairness to local retailers, lawmakers should enact a commensurate cut in income taxes.

"(Online tax collections) won't change the retail trajectory away from online sales," Latino said. "What it will do is make starting and operating a small online business much more complicated, as companies without lawyers and accountants navigate laws in nearly 10,000 tax jurisdictions across America."
